PLEXUS Conference :: Design BUSK+HERTZOG

Plexus dares to push the boundaries of design and engineering. The elegant wood base design is the key design element of this table. It features beautiful detailing of carefully crafted finger joints with a refined curve inset along the exterior of the leg. It has a shape that is both evocative and contemporary and features a wide range of options and finishes with impeccable details that reveal the highest manufacturing capabilities. With two base sizes Plexus is ideal for executive boardrooms, conference rooms and small meetings rooms. While the wood base option allows for power and data connections via a discrete conduit to the floor, the aluminum base options' innovative construction allows for integrated power solutions to be concealed through the internal chamber of the legs. Exquisite in detail and minimalistic in design it even lends itself for applications in private offices; a truly versatile table that blurs the line between commercial and residential design.

Plexus is a contemporary table which can be configured to almost whatever table width or length is needed without compromising the design concept and visual of the product. The base is based on a classic bridge leg but shaped using both round shapes and strict lines creating a timeless yet modern feel to it. The various optional finishes and table top shapes and finishes makes the combinations as well as the applications endless. The table is equally attractive serving as an exclusive dining table in a private home as a bench-working desk in a modern creative office layout as a traditional meeting table in an executive board room. "We wanted to create a table base that was curved and straight at the same time" –B+H
